Directors' Terms Expiring in December

The terms of Board members Will Wiersig and Brad Jenkins will end this coming December. While both Directors are welcome to accept new four-year terms, their incumbency does not give them any higher status or standing over other candidates choosing to run. All candidates compete on equal ground for the two open positions.

Candidates must be property owners and must be on file with the Orange County Registrar of Voters (OC ROV) to vote with a Beach Road mailing address.

Terms for Directors are four years with Board meetings once per month. The current meeting schedule is the last Tuesday of each month.

If there are only enough candidates to fill the two vacancies, then the positions are filled by an appointment process. However, should there be more candidates than open seats, then there must be an election held to decide the winners.

Elections for Directors are processed through the OC ROV and candidates must file with the ROV no later than the first week in August in order to get on the ballot. This is the same ballot where we will all be voting for President of the United States – no special election and no special ballots.

Beginning next month, the District will be mailing board vacancy notices to all property owners in preparation for the November election, and at that time will begin accepting nominations for candidates.
